

ORGANIZING THE ACADEMIC PRECARIAT

Perspectives on National Trends and Recent Successes

Friday, March 24, 2017, 12-6pm

Murphy Institute, CUNY, 25 West 43rd St. 18th Fl.

Free | Lunch provided

Adjuncts, lecturers, and other contingent faculty are:

- 50% of faculty at public research universities
- Nearly 60% at private research universities
- Over 80% at public community colleges

Average adjunct pay, nationally, is:

- $2,700 per course
- $21,000 per year on a full teaching load

Join us for this half-day conference of scholars, unionists, and adjuncts to explore the latest research on the academic precariat and recent breakthroughs in adjunct organizing. What are the national and local trends in contingent academic labor? What can we learn from successful adjunct organizing in Washington, D.C., California, and New York, where Barnard College adjuncts have just won $7,000 per course and $10,000 by 2021? What will recent and future threats to labor and higher education mean for contingent faculty?

Speakers:

Stephen Brier, CUNY · Malini Cadambi Daniel, SEIU

Luke Elliott-Negri, CUNY · Steven Hurlburt, American Institutes of Research

Jonathan Karpf, California Faculty Association

Sonam Singh, Barnard Contingent Faculty-UAW Local 2110
